CHARACTERIZATION OF WHEAT VARIETIES BY ALBUMIN AND GLIADIN PROTEIN ELECTROPHORESIS

Vinod Kumar Dhatwalia*, O.P. Sati1, M.K. Tripathi2, P.K. Chauhan1 and Ashok Kumar1
1. Department of Chemistry, N. B. Garhwal University, Srinagar U.K. INDIA
2. Department of Biotechnology, ICFAI University, Dehradun U.K. INDIA
*Corresponding author, E-mail: vinodkhatwalia@gmail.com

We have isolated and characterized Albumin and Gliadin protein from eight different varieties of Indian wheat and it is concluded that seed storage protein profiles could be useful markers in the studies of genetic diversity and classification of adapted cultivars, thereby improving the efficiency of wheat breeding programs in cultivar development especially in a developing country like India.