Ag. Update, February-May 2008, Vol. 3 (1&2) : 27-30

AN ECONOMIC STUDY ON CROPPING PATTERN OF NADIA DISTRICT OF WEST BENGAL, INDIA

B. ROY, B.K. BERA AND A.K. NANDI

See end of the article for authors' affiliations

Correspondence to :
A.K. NANDI
Department of Agricultural Economics,
Bidhan Chandra Krishi Viswavidyalaya, Mohanpur,
NADIA (W.B.) INDIA

Accepted : September, 2007

ABSTRACT

The study is based on field level primary data collected form two villages of Nadia district of West Bengal. The study reveals that the cropping intensity of the district is 259.61 percent. The cropping pattern of this district is characterized by the domination of non-food grain crops i.e. high valued vegetable crops which shows a sign of transformation from traditional pattern to high valued non-food grain crops.